Celebrating Oregon's Community Banks

In honor of Oregon's Community Bank Week, October 12 - 16, Pacific Continental Bank would like to celebrate the essential role that Oregon's community banks play in our local economy.

Together, we help Oregon families achieve financial stability and drive small business lending, which helps keep Oregon economically healthy and vibrant. Oregon's community banks also contribute more than $3.5 million and 800,000 volunteer hours per year to community and charitable organizations.

At Pacific Continental Bank, giving back has always been an important part of who we are and what we do. Our Giving With Heart program provides opportunities for employees to give back to their local communities. Whether it's hosting educational events or teaching children about financial literacy, Pacific Continental Bank is committed to strengthening Oregon's communities.

This Week Is "Community Bank Week" In Oregon

Salem, Ore. – To celebrate the impact of community banks on their communities and the state's economy, Gov. Kate Brown proclaimed Oct. 12-16 as Community Bank Week.

"Community banks are vital members of Oregon's communities," said Department of Consumer and Business Services Director Patrick Allen. "These bankers live here, they work here, and they want to see Oregon flourish. They understand the needs of their neighbors and are invested in seeing their local communities succeed."

Oregon's 21 state chartered community banks held $30.7 billion in total assets as of June 30, 2015, compared with $21.7 billion in total assets a decade ago. They employ about 6,286 individuals. Oregon community banks had loans totaling $21.8 billion, representing 91 percent of their total core deposits. Across the nation, community banks made more than 50 percent of all loans to farms and small businesses, despite the fact that community banks' share of total banking assets is less than 14 percent.

Next week, community banks will host consumers, students, small businesses, and local elected officials to showcase the positive impact banks have on the people they serve.

The Department of Consumer and Business Services regulates Oregon's community banks and is Oregon's largest consumer protection and business regulatory agency.

Oregon celebrates community bank week

By May O'Mahoney Tue, Oct 13, 2015

Brad Webster, chief business development officer for Citizens Bank, Corvallis, Ore. speaks on the importance of recognizing the state's independent financial institutions.

To highlight the positive impact community banks have on Oregon's economy, Governor Kate Brown has declared the week of October 12-16 as Community Bank Week.

Extending over $10 billion in credit each year — including a significant amount to small businesses and agriculture — Oregon's state-chartered community banks held $30.7 billion in total assets as of June 30, 2015, compared to $21.7 billion in assets a decade ago.

What makes Oregon's community banks vital to the communities they serve extends past financial services. Per a recent report compiled by the Oregon Bankers Association, "Oregon community banks contributed over $3.5 million per year to community and charitable organizations and donated more than 800,000 volunteer
